Board of Trustees in Hectic Session

If the suggestion of one of our prominent citizens—sportively inclined—is adopted, there need be no further worry as to the method to be adopted to secure funds to install the proposed general sewer system.

With Block 69 available for an arena and Tex Rickard willing to handle the affair, a finish fight could be put on between Perry Newberry and George M. Dorwart. It would undoubtedly draw an immense gate.

The foregoing statement is the result of Tuesday evening's stormy session of the city trustees. Trustee Newberry started the entertainment when he asked the removal of an alleged obstruction on Rev. Dorwart's property. Newberry's motion referred to the city attorney for an opinion as to their legality certain property transactions between the city and Dorwart, while Dorwart was a trustee, was defeated.

Challenging Dorwart's statement that he (Newberry) was not a taxpayer, Newberry said that he had been a taxpayer for thirteen years. Dot's dot.

City Engineer Howard D. Sevenau stated that plans for the new sewer system were nearly completed and would probably be placed before the trustees a week from next Tuesday.

Discussing the matter of financing the sewer system, Mason D. Schlosser, concrete engineer, stated his opinion that the cost of the improvement would be less under a bond election than by the 1911 act, for the reason that under the former the city would have the cash on hand before the contract was let, and could secure lower bids on a cash basis. Also that city bonds would carry a less rate of interest than district bonds and could be sold for a larger premium.

Then came the semi-windup.

Dorwart vs. Campbell.

Catch weights.

It came about in this way:

When the trustees were about to pass upon the monthly bills, including those of the city attorney, Dorwart questioned a number of items in Campbell's bill. The city attorney explained lucidly, and then Dorwart stated that while he did not question the integrity of the city attorney, yet as a taxpayer he was interested in conserving the funds of the city and that he objected to the city attorney's demands for this reason.

There was a lot more talk, and in conclusion Campbell stated that he was glad that Dorwart was acquiring such an intense interest in conserving the city funds, but that he did not evidence such interest while he was a member of the board, and called attention to a claim by a former attorney for a single street proceeding, which had been declared void, where the fee of the attorney was over a thousand dollars. At that time, he continued, Dorwart was perfectly willing that this attorney be paid more in more in one proceeding for doing it wrong than he had been paid in all subsequent proceedings for doing it right.

Dorwart denied this, but Campbell said he had seen a letter of Dorwart's that proved his statement.

End of round.

Street Commissioner Newberry secured the trustees' consent to his plan for rehabilitating the highway in north Carmel. Sidney Ruthven will do the work.

In the matter of business license legislation, Trustee Helen W. Parkes, to whom the matter was referred, will shortly render a report.

Two Splendid Plays Will Inaugurate New Theater

Dainty Chinese maids will usher you to your seats on the opening night of the new Arts and Crafts theatre on November 28, when "The Three Promised Bride" will be produced by John Northern Hilliard. The curtain will rise on the simple setting of the conventional Chinese stage. The only furniture is two chairs for the Magistrate and the Secretary. There are also rich curtains exquisitely embroidered with threads of gold and bright colored silks hanging over the two entrances. That is all for it is one of the axioms of the Chinese drama that acting should make the scenery and not vice-versa.

The author has kept in the Chinese dramatic idiom in telling his story. The story goes long ago many years before China became a republic, and the place is the Magistrate's Court in an interior district in Ho-Nan Province, China. The first character to enter is the Magistrate. After displaying his royal robes with much waving of his long sleeves he enters. Everything is ready now and the other characters make their entrance walking and stepping to suggest to the mind of the audience doors and steps. There is a military man who enters briskly; the rich merchant, who enters in a more dignified manner and prostrates himself before the Magistrate; the matchmaker, who is often the fool or clown in a Chinese play and who defies all customs and traditions of all stages except in China; the bride, a young beauty, and her mother; and a young scholar, a beggar. There are three suitors for the maid of the Han family. The merchant Li Che-Fu offers his golden ingots, his red mansion and prosperity; Chung Ting, the soldier, his glory, silvery horses and skilled arrows; and the student, his love. And the scholar wins.

Unlike most Chinese dramas there is comedy throughout. During the intermission the Chinese girls will again play their parts and serve tea to the audience.

In direct contrast to the Chinese play is the second number on the program, "The Queen's Enemies." This is the story of the lovely but extremely eccentric young queen who bewails the fact that she has enemies but invites them to a feast to a rescue. Reconciliation in an underground temple situated on the bank of the Nile. Now that the step is taken she is afraid; they may kill her, for she is so small and so young. After much fear and trembling she decides to go through with it, and the guests arrive. At first they fear a trap and will not eat, but she dispels their fears with promises to restore their lands she has taken, and the company becomes merry, and jest and story fly across the board. In the midst of this merrymaking she leaves the room to pray, as she tells her guests, to a very sacred god. They now fear a trap and guards are placed at the door, the one entrance to the room, except the dark hole in the wall. The

Serra Sarcophagus to be Dedicated Next August

Though the handsome sarcophagus at Carmel Mission in which the mortal dust of Father Junipero Serra, founder of the California missions, is to repose, is nearing completion, the dedicatory services will not be held until August 28, next year, the 139th anniversary of Father Serra's death.

It is largely through the efforts of Father R. M. Mestres, who has taken almost a lifelong interest in the preservation and restoration of missions and other California landmarks, that a fitting monument is being erected at old Carmel, where Father Serra lived for fourteen years and where he was buried.

The sarcophagus, designed by Jo Mora, eminent sculptor, will be of bronze and California marble.

Father Mestres says:

"The sarcophagus will be dominated by a figure of Father Serra, recumbent, though the general design of the monument calls for additional figures and emblems characteristic of California. The statuary and carving will not be confined alone to persons and subjects of a religious nature, but will tell symbolically the history of the organization and growth and resources of the State."

The memorial will be paid for by contributions from Serra admirers throughout the State and adjoining States.

It is planned to celebrate the dedication of the monument with elaborate ceremonies.

Uncle Sam's Landlord

On March 3 this year this journal published an article captioned "Who's Uncle Sam's Landlord?" The article related the three-cornered controversy involving the ownership of the local postoffice building. The parties concerned were T. W. Morgan, Jr., of this city, W. H. Abbott of Pebble Beach, and T. A. Oakes of Santa Cruz.

The question can now be definitely answered. Your Uncle's landlord is Thomas W. Morgan, Jr. The lease for ten years has been signed, sealed and delivered and Mr. Morgan gets the rent.

Puppets Perform at Arts and Crafts

The oldest art in the world made its appearance here at Arts and Crafts Hall last night when the Kegg-Goldsby Marionettes production, "Cinderella," was given.

The little feet of marionettes have danced down the ages since the beginning of history; they have been found in Sanskrit drama; they have been unearthed by archaeologists delving in ancient Rome. The Chinese have always had what are commonly known as puppets in their religious ceremonies and their amusements. Ancient Greece had marionette theatres in her principal cities.

Everyone knows what marionettes do and have done for the human race—how they open the doors of the imagination, how they lead you dancing through into the world of romance; how, more than actors, they have the power to give us beauty and motion and fantasy and make-believe.

Everyone knows this intellectually, through reading the writings of great men and women, but to realize it as a truth, one has to see them—to attend such a performance as we had last night and are to have again tonight to sit and watch these puppets change under our very eyes, grow more alive with every act, until, when the last curtain falls, they are life-size, they are human beings, they are even as we are.

Fannie Goldsmith wrote this play with so sure an understanding of what children like that she dared to take the best known fairy tale of all and still keep it the same and still turn it into something different, with odd little twists of humor and fancy and quaint touches of pathos and beauty. George Kegg, the artist, who carved the puppets and made the properties, has created individuals that put him in the front rank of puppeteers and puppet-makers.

Red Cross Roll Call Begins Next Monday

The Seventh Annual Roll Call of the Red Cross all over the country will be from November 11 to December 25. As usual, Carmel is divided into sections and volunteer workers will call at every house to collect annual dues. Opportunity for those to enroll whom the workers do not see is offered by the Pine Cone office, where dues will be received and pins and membership cards given.

It is hoped that Carmel will maintain as large a membership as in former years. Fifty cents from each membership goes to the national and international Red Cross work. The balance is used for local relief work.

Worthy Appeal for Children's Books

Books in circulation wear out rapidly.

Libraries replace favorites again and again.

There is a constant and pressing need of more books—especially children's books.

Everyone who has regard for the future welfare of society realizes that the requirements of children should have first place.

Will you not search your shelves for the books which your own children no longer read and give them to Carmel Library, where they will be hailed with delight and read by scores of children?

The Pine Cone echoes the library board's appeal for juvenile book donations and bespeaks an immediate and generous response, in anticipation of which the officials of the Carmel Library thank you on behalf of the children.

"Ask Mr. Foster"

Moutere Peninsula Communities Inc., tri city promotion and publicity body, has a new manager—a business man pure and simple—Fenton P. Foster of Carmel.

The directors of the organization recently accepted the resignations of John N. Hilliard, manager, and A. C. Jochmus, secretary.

The preparation of practically all of the publicity matter in the way of booklets, circulars and advertising having been completed, Mr. Hilliard felt that his work was completed. He will now devote his time to literary and theatrical interests.

Jochmus resumes his newspaper work and his manifold duties as secretary of the Pacific Grove chamber of commerce.

The entire marionette company was entertained at dinner on Monday night, the hostess being Dr. Amelia L. Gates.

Queen above, unseen and unheard by them, prays to old Father Nile.

"Hear me, O Nile; for it is not the meat of beast only."

I have slaves for you and princes and a king. There has been no such sacrifice.

Come down, O Nile, from the sunlight.

O ancient Egyptian river! The sacrifice is ready.

O Nile, hear me."

There is a pause.

"Harli, let in the water upon the princes and gentlemen."

Green torrents swirl down into the room from the black hole.

Queen—O Ackazarpes! Are all my enemies gone?

Ackazarpes—Illustrious Lady, the Nile has taken them all.

Queen—That holy river!

Ackazarpes—Illustrious Lady, you will sleep tonight.

Queen—Yes, I shall sleep sweetly.

Many people do not understand the character of Dunsany's Queen. Was her character just ~~more~~ a nose, they ask. Could one who was truly so lovely and gentle, turn around and do such a ruthless murder? There is no sign in the play by which the audience could know.

Dunsany says of her, "The Queen of my play was, of course, an unusual character, but it is not entirely unique. She is self-centered. Enemies annoy her. It is natural to get rid of them. She was sincere when she prayed to the Nile."

The play was written in Dunsany Castle early in the year 1913. The theme of "The Queen's Enemies" he owes to a lady, and not, he says, one of those dreamy women, who, having got an idea, write a sonnet about it; she did it; she got the motive of drowning her enemies, so she invited them to a dinner and drowned them. That is all he knew about her.

"She was a live woman whenever the Sixth Dynasty was thriving in Egypt," he says, "I think she came a little more alive out of my fancy than she might have of some book. I mention this lady in order to show that the story is not only a very simple one, but it actually worked, and worked, I believe, very nicey."

"If," he continues, "there is a moral in the play I trust that any one who has had anything to do with the play will not 'profit by' the moral, for I do not consider it at all right to give a dinner party and then drown the guests."

Miss Blanche Tolmie will play the Queen in Hilliard's production. This will be a part that will call forth the qualities of personality, charm and rare dramatic artistry that are Miss Tolmie's endowments as an actress.

Perry Newberry will produce Charles Caldwell Dobie's "Doubling in Brass," rehearsals for which have been held during the past week. His cast has been chosen and was announced in last week's Pine Cone. This cast will contain many of the old-timers of Carmel, for Mr. Newberry says he is trying to make this performance a theatre warming, so to speak. The play, which was recently produced by the Players Club of San Francisco, is exciting as any melodrama that can be found and, the action is tense, although there is rollicking comedy throughout. There is a robbery committed by the heroine while hypnotized; there is a murder; a false accusation made against the hero; and the last big scene when matters are all straightened out, and as the fairy tales say, "They lived happily ever after."

STREET SIGNS

Carmel, like many other small cities, is poorly provided with street signs. People have the idea that the residents know all about where the streets are, and visitors are not much considered. Consequently the visitors are a good deal puzzled to find their way about.

It is customary in cities, large and small, to place signs at intersecting streets, but our people assume that everyone knows the name of the leading avenues, and no markers are placed on them. This is bewildering to strangers.

Well maintained signs on all street corners are one of the signs of the progressive city. They make strangers feel that their comfort and convenience are considered.

AN EDITOR'S PERSONALITY

Of "The Editorials of Henry Watterson" (Doran's) compiled by Arthur Krock, long the managing editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal, has been made a book which is in truth a biography of the man who wrote them. It could not be otherwise, for Watterson's journalism was personal from start to finish. Those who read his editorials read Watterson—not the Courier-Journal—with all his intimate personal reactions to men and things and events. He was rich in emotions and poured them out lavishly in all he wrote, with all his whimsies, prejudices, likes and dislikes. He made his editorial columns a picture of the heart and intellect of himself day by day. All who read him knew him.

That was the glory of the old personal journalism—its intimate revelations of the man—and just into Vope's line, "The proper study of mankind is man." Editorial readers of fifty years ago were reading men rather than papers, absorbing the personality of a great writer, a Dana or Greeley in New York, a Bolles in Massachusetts, a Medill in Chicago, a Halstead in Cincinnati, a Rosewater in Omaha, a Brownlow in Knoxville, and other outstanding personalities in editorial chairs in Kansas City, Atlanta, San Francisco and elsewhere.

All that has passed. Editorial reputations now belong to newspapers, not to individuals. Journalism has become impersonal, at least so far as the general public is concerned, in editorial columns. The personal touch comes now only through the "column" writers, the critics of music, drama and literature, and the special writers of signed articles for whose opinions the newspapers are not responsible.

Pine Cone's Log of Literature & Art

Says They Are Not Fakes

Robert B. Harshe, director of the Chicago Art Institute, rushed to the defense of the authenticity of one of the institution's treasures—"Portrait of a Girl," Rembrandt—declared by Professor John C. Van Dyke's new book to be bogus. In proof Harshe reviewed the history of the picture.

It would bring $300,000 at public auction, he asserted.

"It is unfortunate for Dr. Van Dyke's reputation if he made this statement," Harshe said. "Superior art experts of the world have declared it genuine. Among these are Wilhelm Bode, director of the Kaiser Friedrich Museum; Dr. William Valentine, curator of the Metropolitan Museum, and Dr. Hofstede de Groot, foremost authority on Dutch art in the world and director of Ryk's Museum, Amsterdam."

"The picture was purchased by the Chicago Art Institute from the famous Demidoff collection in 1880. Previously it had been owned by Gessler in Paris, by Robit in Paris and by George Hibbert in London."

French Author Becomes Monk

Following his announced determination to abandon literature and become a hermit, the world of French letters has been thrown into great confusion by a report that Pierre Benoit, famous author of "Atlantide" and other works, had become a monk.

Six telegrams addressed to Benoit by his publisher, Albin Michel, have not been answered.

Benoit has always been known as an ascetic. A year ago he played a practical joke on his friends by pretending to be kidnapped. The year before that a controversy arose over alleged plagiarism in several of his books, and even now a law suit is on in France in which Rider Haggard, author of "She," claims that "Atlantide" is a plagiarism of his own work.

Talented Negro Farm Laborer

A young black man reared on a Georgia farm returns to America from Europe. He returns with at least some portion of fame. For several years Roland Hayes has been singing recitals in England and on the Continent. His success has been astonishing, with public acclamations and ecstasies of praise from the critics. As a pinnacle to these honors he sang by royal command before King George at Buckingham Palace. Now he returns to the U. S. to test his native country.

Roland Hayes began his life with the hard labor of the small farm-holding negroes of the South. His parents owned a small piece of cotton land. The boy and his brother plowed, chopped cotton, picked cotton. In time he contrived to work his way through Fiske University at Nashville. He had a pleasant tenor voice. He undertook vocal studies. He made a little reputation and began his professional career.

Rummage Sale for Carmel Library

Preparations are being made for a rummage sale for the benefit of Carmel Library. This will not be the ordinary sale of second-hand clothing. It is proposed to sell furniture, utensils, tools, mechanical contrivances, books, and other articles.

"Frequently," as one of the library trustees puts it, "you have something that I want, and I have something that you want."

The idea is to conduct a sort of clearing house for unused articles, which the public is expected to donate.

Scouts Want Leader

Anyone knowing of a man who would like to lead a group of Boy Scouts, please mail a card to B. R. Loxley, P. O. Box 651, Carmel.

Meetings are held every Friday at 7:30 at the Carmel Church. The next few meetings will be devoted to knot-tying.

Pasadena Players Will Produce Masefield Play

Pasadena's Community Players will have the honor of making the first presentation of John Masefield's new play, London. He has cabled them permission to give the play seven times, starting next Monday night, November 12.

That the consecrated things are wiser than our virtues is the substance of Masefield's play. The story is similar to "Smilin' Through," which was popular several years ago. It possesses striking literary beauty and is highly dramatic.

Lovers of the theatre as an institution rather than merely a place of amusement, in Southern California, are enthused over this recognition of the Pasadena Community Playhouse. There will be many theatre parties from the various literary and dramatic clubs to attend the premiere, which will be produced under the direction of Gilmor Brown.

The cast will include Mrs. Clinton C. Clarke, Arthur Lubin, Mrs. Lillian Ryerson, Edward Murphy, Mrs. Rufus Spalding, Mrs. Ray Glass and Mrs. Wendall Shaw. All Community Players are non-professionals and play for the love of it, as in Carmel's Forest Theatre and the Arts and Crafts Little Theatre, rather than as a business.

The local fire department was called out Tuesday afternoon to subdue a roof fire caused by a defective flue, in the Horn house on San Carlos Ave. The shingles were badly burned, but before nightfall, through insurance agent J. W. Hand, the loss was adjusted and the roof reshingled.

Life Saving Work Of Red Cross Corps Wars on Drownings

The insignia of the American Red Cross Life Saving Corps on the bathing apparel of men, women and youths is seen everywhere at favorite bathing places along the coasts, rivers, lakes and ponds. In its unrelenting campaign to reduce loss of life by drowning the Red Cross is making constant headway. The demands for instruction from organizations in all parts of the country were so numerous the past year that it was necessary to more than double the staff of Red Cross instructors. This work of training for water life-saving showed an enrollment of over 30,000 volunteers enlisted for duty on patrol, for rescue and resuscitation, all competent to instruct others in the standard water-safety methods. The Red Cross by request of the War Department gives water first aid training at the United States Military and Naval academies and in the military training camps for reserve officers and civilians. The four cash prizes awarded by the Red Cross last year for heroic rescues were conferred upon two girls, a boy and a man, indicating that the youths of the country stand well at the top in conserving life along our water courses.

Editor The Pine Cone:

Having received credit for approving road plan to Carmel, I wish to state that although being at the meeting of the board of supervisors, I was not there as a member of any committee. My business was not connected in any way with the proposed road. I have requested a denial on the part of the Pacific Grove Review, and say that now and always I am in favor of any and all kinds of improvement.

National Contest for Students in Chemistry Work

Will C. Wood, state superintendent of Education, has been notified of the opening of the prize essay contest of the American Chemical Society in which students of high and secondary schools in this and other states have been invited to compete in a national contest for $10,000 in cash prizes and scholarships to Yale, Vassar, and other universities and colleges.

The contest, which is the result of the gift of Mr. and Mrs. Francis P. Garvan of New York, is a memorial to their daughter, Patricia, and is intended to stimulate interest among high school students in the development of chemical science in this country. All arrangements for the contest are in the hands of the Committee on Prize Essays of the American Chemical Society, with headquarters in the Munson Building, New York.

Miss Ida Maynard Curtis, who left here for Provincetown, Mass., about a year ago, is now in New York City, where she has taken a studio.

H. W. Turner has returned from Montana. Carmel certainly looked good to him. When he left the north, people were moving about ankle-deep in snow.

Russell's ranch near Madera, in San Joaquin county, had as week-end sojourners Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Gottfried, who went out of town to celebrate their fourth wedding anniversary.

A change has been made in the cast of "Doubling in Brass," the month-end Arts and Crafts play. Winsor Josselyn will be away, so Charles Berkey will take his place.

On the Eighth avenue side of Hills Place there is being erected a unique little studio, constructed mainly of redwood logs. Mrs. Hill is a talented decorator, and the success of her venture is assured.

According to a title in the Superior Court in Salinas the estate of the late Mrs. Ellen S. White is valued at about $20,000. Francis McComber of Rochester, N. Y., the only heir, has applied for probate of the will.

Miss Eunice T. Gray's guest for several days last week was her sister, Miss Adaline Gray of Palo Alto. With her came Mr. and Mrs. Neary Hovey and Mr. and Mrs. Orra Havens of Darlington, Wis. They are motoring about the U. S. A. Carmel made a hit with them.

Carmel postoffice is to have a new experienced permanent clerk. Charles Titmus has been transferred from the postoffice at Dinuba, Tulare county, to the local office. Mr. Titmus, who will begin his work here next week, has had sixteen years' experience in postoffice work. He's married.

Miss Ruth Huntington, trustee of the local public school, is spending a month or longer at Pasadena.
